

Original survey information, Uruguay 2013

Generic information
Name of survey	Continuous Household Survey ( Encuesta Continua de Hogares – ECH )
Responsible institution	National Institute of Statistics ( Instituto Nacional de Estadística - INE )
Main objective	To provide basic information to determine the level of economic activity of the population; to study its socio-economic characteristics and the income level of households.
Structure of data source	Cross-sectional continuous household survey.
Frequency	Annual
Survey year / Wave	2013
Coverage	Residents of private or collective dwellings that are one or more private households throughout the national territory. Excluded are members of collective households or individuals living in collective households such as hospitals, convents, crèches, long stay (nursing homes), prisons, offshore residences (embassies and consulates), barracks, hotels and pensions.
Sampling
Sampling procedure	The sampling frame is based on the dwelling and household listings by Census 2011. Sampling is probabilistic and stratified into 81 strata. The sample is drawn in three stages: department (subdivided by socio-economic level), census zone and private dwelling.
Sample size	Achieved sample: 46,622 dwellings.
Collection
Collection period	Continuous (January-December 2013)
Collection mode	Direct interview with Pocket PC in the entire country.
Description of instruments	A questionnaire, with two sections on dwelling and household characteristics, one section on general characteristics, health and education of all household members, and two sections on occupational status and income generated by household members 14 years old and older.
Definitions
Household	Private household (ECH's unit of analysis): Person or group of persons, usually but not necessarily related by kinship, who live under one roof and depend on a common fund, at least for food. These people tend to pool their incomes, create a common budget, and share the use of durable and non-durable goods. Every private household should have a head. Collective households are not subject matter of the ECH.
Household head	Household member of at least 18 years old, who is no domestic servant and who is most knowledgeable of the entire household situation.
Data quality aspects
Non-response error	The response rate is 89.3%.
Item non-response / imputation	Item non-response has not been imputed. The data provider has imputed the amount of the contributions to compulsory health mutual funds ( cuotas mutuales ) and to voluntary additional health insurance ( emergencia móvil ), the value of in-kind benefits from the employer, the value of food baskets ( canastas ), as well as the amount of family allowances ( asignaciones familiares ) and compensation for constituted households ( hogar constituido ).
Weighting	Expansion factors are derived from the sampling design to expand the sample to the national population. There are annual, semiannual and quarterly expansion factors according to the period over which one wants to report statistics.
Labour market information
Eligibility	14 years old or older
Employment	The reference period for employment is generally a week before the interview (Monday through Sunday). For a job search and related activities it is four weeks prior to the interview. Occupied are the eligible persons who worked at least one hour the week before the survey, or who did not work for reasons of vacation/holidays, illness or accident, labour dispute; or who interrupted their work due to bad weather, breakdowns in machinery or lack of raw materials, but are sure of having the job to go back to. Included in this category are unpaid family workers and honorary teachers.
Income
Reference period	The reference periods vary, depending on the concept of income. For labour income, pension, subsidies or leases the relevant period is the calendar month prior to the interview. For income from profits, dividends or interest the reference period is the last twelve months prior to the interview.
Unit of time	Mainly monthly. For income from leases, interest from bank accounts, profits, dividends, severance pay or extraordinary income, the unit of time is annual. Finally for food assistance, the unit is weekly.
Unit of collection	Household for capital income; Individual for labour income and transfers.
Taxes and contributions	Revenues are reported net of taxes. There is no information on taxes in the survey (with the exception of tax refunds), nor social insurance contributions (with the exception of the contributions towards health mutual funds as reported in the imputation section above).
